To whom it may concern:

During the 2016 election cycle I ran a pseudo campaign for County Commissioner in Cowlitz County, Washington. To pay the high entrance fee to run I did a fundraiser via the website Gofundme. I had raised $1,070.00 via gofundme. I had thought I filed under the mini reporting style with the PDC and had not realized I filed the wrong paperwork until after the primary was over. I knew I would not be making it through the primary (I think I got about 6% of the vote) and so I knew I wasn't going to be raising a lot of funds (that's why I thought I had filled out the mini reporting) Once someone from my political party had pointed out that I had filled out the full reporting style the race was over for me and I really didn't think it mattered at that point. This whole not reporting issue was just a big mistake and luckily for me I have all the information needed to report everything in the gofundme account. The next time I decide to run for office as a joke I will most certainly make sure and file the proper paperwork with the state as to not waste anybody's time and energy on this matter further.
