SPECIFIC VIOLATIONS OF LAW BY SENATOR PAM ROACH -- 89 COUNTS

Washington State Senator Pam Roach has been in office for almost a quarter century, and has been contacted by the PDC on many occasions concerning PDC filing requirements. She has been found in violation of PDC rules in the past for filing required reports as much as 392 days late, seriously flagrant violations, for which she was found guilty and fined.

During those encounters with the PDC, going back many years, she became aware of the rules and requirements. Senator Roach is not new to campaigning and reporting of campaign finances. Indeed she is a veteran of many complex and expensive campaigns over the years and has had ample opportunity to educate herself as to the reporting and filing requirements of the State of Washington and the requirements of the campaign finance laws that were enacted in 1972.

Aside from having the ability to read and study the reasonably simple campaign finance laws and reporting requirements, Senator Roach has significant financial resources in her campaign account to hire professional help to assist her in the timely filing of any such reports and checking the accuracy of those filings. If she was a new candidate, or had no resources and no prior contact with the system, she might plead ignorance of the law, or that she lacked the resources to comply with the requirements.

In this case, Senator Roach has had almost 25 years to look at the requirements of reporting and filing with the PDC, and in the case that she might not have done so, or if she were not competent to understand them herself, she had approximately $50,000, only a very small portion of which would have been required to hire a professional to do this work for her to make sure she was in compliance.

Many companies and individuals offer these services. Additionally, the PDC offers, for free, a system called ORCA, which is plainly advertised on their website, and is so simple to use for reporting purposes that anyone with even a marginal educational background could use ORCA to enter the information and submit the forms electronically on time with little difficulty.

Senator Roach's continued failure to comply with PDC rules, which goes back decades, exhibits an arrogance of power and willful failure to comply with Washington State Public Disclosure Laws, depriving the 31st Legislative District citizens of the transparency they demanded when they passed the campaign finance laws back in 1972 by citizen initiative.

Make no mistake about it - this was not some simple act of confusion, an error or omission. I believe that it is a carefully choreographed political trick to hide her campaign contributions for many months, and then report and re-report them in early May to make it look like there was an outpouring of support to her campaign and against her opponent's right before filing week in May of 2014.

In reality these campaign contributions came in long before four other candidates, Jonathan Dunn, Cathy Dahlquist, Lane Walthers and Lynda Messner, had announced in the Senate race. This is, in my opinion, an unfair, egregious and knowing violation of public disclosure laws to manipulate the campaign and candidate filing and selection process.

Re-filing improperly filed reports and late filed reports seem to show a level of support that in fact did not exist at that time, but had come in much earlier. The effect was to make other candidates fear that Senator Roach was gaining a great deal of momentum not long after they themselves had entered the race. There is no other plausible explanation for an experienced politician to be so irresponsible or sloppy.

Additionally, there are ample stories in the Seattle Times, Tacoma News Tribune and on KIRO TV in recent weeks that outline the way in which Senator Roach has allegedly tried to manipulate the election process this year with a fake Democratic candidate, and this is but an additional bit of evidence that supports that theory of using these late filings and re-filings to impact the race. Please review the following stories as part of your investigation, which will offer possible motive for the actions of Senator Roach in this case:
